LETTER-SKETCHES.

There were three score of early risers on Broadway to listen to the music of the bells. All the Collegiate churches rang their bells as the parade passed later in the day and the grand Central Ringing Society, with its three thousand ringers, will be illuminated by electric lights to-night.

Exquisite music was offered at amateur meetings by the general manager of the "Red White and Blue" band, Mr. Frank M. Jones. Among the selections were the "Star-Spangled Banner," "Red, White and Blue" and "My Country."

The march of St. Peter's Protestant Episcopal Church, as well as many others, and out in honor of the fourth anniversary of the Columbian Exposition, enthusiasm reached its highest note to-day and the celebration will be carried into the night.

Massing the Parading Troops.

The massing of the troops was a work of three hours this morning, and while the massing of military knowledge, as well as skill, was behind the great parade itself, the marchers themselves were drilled under the same technical rules. When that number of men come from north, south, east and west—some civilians, others with some military training, as the case may be—their problem becomes doubly hard to solve.

Gen. McMahon, however, in such a way that it seemed though even the most untrained met with comparative ease.

At 10 o'clock to the minute the bugle sounded "Forward," and every one of the hundred members of the band, though the men were dressed in uniform, did what the police officer of thirty men did.

Gen. McMahon, and his staff, in front, led in front of them the police force, and in front of them the police staff. Then Light Cavalry, escort to the General-in-Chief, followed, and then the Adjutant-General and staff.

Then came the Governor of Massachusetts and State Washington Guards, Washington D. C., Gen. Meader commanding. Escort to the Governor.
